Travel Style

Our Self-Guided Walking Adventures are ideal for travelers with an independent spirit who enjoy exploring at their own pace. We provide authentic accommodations, luggage transfers, and some meals, along with comprehensive Route Notes, detailed maps, and 24-hour emergency assistance. This gives you the freedom to focus on the things that matter to you—no group, no guide, and no set schedule to stand in the way of enjoying your adventure, your way.

Overview

Cornwall, England's most southwesterly region, contains some of the nation's most dramatic scenery and fascinating history, thus making it a walker's delight. A peninsula between the open Atlantic and the tamer English Channel, it has both spectacular cliffs over the ocean, with waves crashing on long sandy beaches, and waters tamed in picturesque harbors and inviting coves, in places with an aquamarine hue. The varied geography not only shelters sturdy stone cottages and surprisingly subtropical vegetation such as palm trees and acacias, but also results in a unique soft light, long attracting artists to paint Cornwall's glorious contrasts and flower bedecked towns. Sumptuous hotels in coastal towns are your base for walking, exploration of historic sites, and fine dining rooted in the bounty of lush grazing and surrounding seas.

Daily Itinerary

DAY 1

Arrival in Bodmin. Transfer to Padstow

The tour starts in Bodmin, on the main rail line from London to Cornwall, where you are picked up for a transfer (approximately 40 minutes) to the Cornish coastal town of Padstow. Once solely a traditional fishing port (which you can learn about at the small town museum), now Padstow's colorful piers, shops, and restaurants are also enjoyed by tourists and recreational sailors. For many in the UK, Padstow is associated with British celebrity chef Rick Stein, a seafood specialist, who owns several restaurants and a cooking school in town. Once settled into your centrally located hotel, you can explore on foot or borrow one of the property's complimentary bikes. With advance reservation and payable locally, you could also participate in a cooking class (not available every day; please visit rickstein.com/school for more information or to make reservations). You proceed to your first of the week's many fine dinners, tonight at the chef's flagship restaurant, with a truly rich array of seafood from fresh oysters to Dover sole, local hake, seafood curry, or lobster thermidor, or Cornish rib-eye steak, if you prefer a land option.

The Seafood Restaurant, Padstow

A restaurant and hotel share the same name, but confusion drops away upstairs in the stylish boutique hotel situated above the restaurant in the center of Padstow. Spacious modern rooms are inviting and soothing with neutral tones and natural wood, decorated by hotel owner and interior designer Jill Stein.

DAY 2

Padstow Circular Walk around Rock; 6 miles, easy, 250-ft elevation gain and loss

After a delicious breakfast at your hotel's restaurant—classic English, or with a specialty fish dish such as grilled kippers—you set off on an easy loop walk beginning with a short scenic ferry ride on the Padstow Rock Ferry across the Camel River estuary. Be sure to check with your hotel about the small ferry's departure point, which can be at one of two places depending on the tide. You watch the pleasure and working boats on the estuary, then, once on the other side, you walk along the water and the long sandy beach stretching from Rock to Daymer Bay, backed by wildflower- and grass-covered dunes. Along the dunes is the ancient St. Enodoc's church, a chapel dating to the 13th century that had to be dug out from the ever-shifting sands that began covering it in the 16th century. You may choose to stop for a hearty lunch at one of the pubs along the way. Further down the trail you pass Brea Hill, a Bronze Age burial mound, before reaching the bucolic village of Pityme and lastly Porthilly Beach. Once back in Padstow, you are free to continue your explorations of the town's many inviting shops and restaurants.

The Seafood Restaurant, Padstow

DAY 3

South West Coast Path to Constantine Bay; 12 miles (7-mile option available), easy to moderate, 300-ft elevation gain and loss

Your walk today is along the South West Coast Path—the longest, and arguably the most scenic, of England’s many long distance National Trails. With a total length of 630 miles, as its name indicates, the path follows the coastline of England’s southwest coast, encompassing the entire coastline of Cornwall, including Land’s End. Following historic trails used by coastguards and locals, you pick up the path by leaving your hotel on foot. The Cornwall portion of the Coast Path is characterized by grassy high cliffs overlooking the open ocean and rocky coves and beaches below, as well as charming villages offering options for pub or café lunches. The end of the walk, and your pickup point, is at Constantine Bay—the long sandy beach preferred by surfers, protected for its biological and geological features, and designated a “Cornwall Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.” You are transferred just over an hour to the lovely seaside town of St. Ives—especially known in Britain for the man in the nursery rhyme with seven wives, sacks, cats, and kittens!* Your home for two nights is a lovely boutique hotel, with views over the Caribbean-like aquamarine waters of the region.

 As I was going to St. Ives
I met a man with seven wives
Every wife had seven sacks
Every sack had seven cats
Every cat had seven kits
Kits, cats, sacks, wives.
How many were going to St. Ives?*

Boskerris Hotel, St. Ives

Overlooking the sandy beach at Carbis Bay, this contemporary boutique hotel has sensational views across St. Ives Bay to Godrevy Point. The décor throughout is light, fresh, and Mediterranean, with lots of glass and a fabulous deck. The fifteen individually designed guest rooms are spacious and airy, with padded headboards, seaside colors, and crisp linens. An on-site restaurant serves an exceptional and extensive menu for breakfast and local produce with Mediterranean flair for dinner—typical dishes include deliciously crisp battered haddock and chips, as well as lamb tagine. In the afternoon, relax and enjoy Cornish cream tea in the lounge, bar, or on the terrace.

DAY 4

Carbis Bay to St. Ives; 8 miles (6.5- and 4-mile options available), easy to moderate, 400-ft elevation gain and loss. St. Ives exploration and/or optional excursion to Zennor

After basking in the stunning views at breakfast, today's walk takes you from your hotel along and above the coastline, accompanied by sea views, to the charming town of St. Ives. You can return on foot or catch a train back to your hotel, thus allowing ample time for exploration of the town or relaxing on the beach. Along the walk, there are relics of Stone Age habitation as well as a medieval chapel and a fisherman's lookout hut. A quaint English seaside resort, St. Ives is an art center with its many craft shops, galleries, and museums (including the Tate Gallery and the Hepworth Collection) lining narrow lanes. You may choose to stay in St. Ives for the evening, or return there by the five-minute train ride to explore its restaurants and cafés, or again enjoy your hotel's fine dining. An additional option today is to take a local bus to the tiny village of Zennor, which is noted for a 15th-century church with its legendary mermaid carving, as well as the Zennor Quoit, said to be Britain's largest Neolithic portal tomb. The English author D.H. Lawrence lived and wrote Women in Love here, calling Zennor "the most beautiful place, lovelier even than the Mediterranean."

Boskerris Hotel, St. Ives

DAY 5

St. Michael's Way; 10 miles, easy to moderate, 600-ft elevation gain and loss

You leave your hotel on foot, fittingly to walk a portion of the ancient pilgrimage route of St. Michael's Way, one of Europe's many medieval pilgrimage routes trail-marked with the scallop shell of Saint James, the patron saint of pilgrims, and leading to Santiago de Compostela in Spain. The Way leads from Carbis Bay on the western side of the peninsula, up and over land to the southern shore and emerges near St. Michael's Mount, the tiny tidal island with a castle and chapel, connected to the mainland by a manmade stone causeway that can be crossed at low tide. The trail rises behind Carbis Bay, traversing sand dunes, to far-reaching views at Trencrom Hill. It is thought that medieval pilgrims, missionaries, and travelers, en route to or from Ireland and Wales, chose this route to avoid the treacherous waters around Land's End. Before reaching your destination, the trail gently descends to sea level, passing through marshes and wetlands rich with birdlife, and you can walk all the way to your hotel in the town of Marazion, with its stunning views of the Mount. You settle in to a well-earned rest and dinner on site.

Godolphin Arms, Marazion

Stunningly located overlooking historic St. Michael's Mount, this warm boutique hotel offers ten light-bathed guest rooms, featuring pretty coastal interiors and comfortable beds with crisp, white linen. Relaxed, mellow common spaces are complemented by a stunning centerpiece—a two-story airy glass and zinc dining area opening out onto a balcony upstairs and a terrace downstairs just steps from the beach.

DAY 6

St. Michael's Mount exploration. Optional coastal walk; 4 miles, easy, 200-ft elevation gain and loss

Based in a perfect place for relaxation and sightseeing, today you can explore the fascinating scenery and history of St. Michael's Mount, walking out to the tidal island at low tide, or crossing by boat. Originally, the Mount had historic Benedictine connections to Mont Saint Michel in Brittany; its monastic buildings date to the 12th century. Clues also suggest the island was a tin port in prehistoric times, and it may even have been mentioned by the Romans and Greeks. By 1424, the connection with the French island monastery was ended, and it passed through the hands of various aristocratic landowners over the centuries, with a small fishing community at its base. Now, the Mount is managed by Britain's National Trust, with a 999-year lease held by the St. Aubyn family. After strolling through the Mount's narrow alleys and ancient stone ways, you may choose to walk along a portion of the South West Coast Path, turning onto an inland trail before looping back to the coast and your hotel. You may also choose to hop a short bus to Penzance, the picturesque town with its pirate background, or to the dramatic scenery of Land's End, England's most westerly point.

Godolphin Arms, Marazion

DAY 7

Departure from Penzance

After a final view of the Mount over breakfast, before noon a 10-minute private transfer takes you from your hotel to the Penzance train station for the train to London.

ITINERARY CHANGES

Please bear in mind that this is a typical itinerary, and the actual activities, sites, and accommodations may vary due to season, special events, weather, or transportation schedules. We reserve the right to alter the itinerary, since tour arrangements are made up to a year in advance and unforeseen circumstances may arise that mandate change. Itinerary changes are made to improve the tour and your experience.

RESPONSIBLE TRAVEL

Country Walkers is a leader in active travel with responsible tourism an integral part of our core values. Our tours reflect our dedication to best travel practices—and to the preservation of indigenous cultures and the environment. Country Walkers has made a donation on behalf of every traveler to the CW Travelers Fund, which supports designated projects in the communities and habitats in which we travel. We invite you to learn more about our efforts and initiatives for giving back.

Here are a couple of examples that highlight our sustainable practices:

For years, the South West Coast Path Association has been instrumental in funding and advocating for improvements to the iconic waymarked trail system that bears its name. This nonprofit organization is heavily involved in trail maintenance and restoration of areas damaged by storms or erosion as well. Country Walkers is proud to partner with this important institution.

Preserving Cornwall's Marine Life

Cornwall's Atlantic Coast is home to an astonishing array of aquatic species, from vivid coral reefs to sea turtles. However, this bounty is under constant threat from invasive species, fishermen's nets, and an epidemic of dolphin stranding. The Cornwall Wildlife Trust seeks to protect the region's valuable coast through their "Living Seas Program," which collects data about local marine life, raises awareness about threats, and campaigns for better protection of species and habitats. Among many other initiatives, they gather data on seabeds through diving surveys, collect sightings of larger animals through their Sequest Southeast Project, and work to map intertidal habitats of the entire coastline from Bude to Land's End. Country Walkers is proud to support this organization's efforts on behalf of every Cornwall guest. We encourage all visitors to help them with their efforts by reporting all marine animals spotted

ACTIVITY LEVEL

This tour is one of our Self-Guided Walking Adventures, rated easy to moderate, with an average of 6 to 10 miles per day and limited options. The easy walks are level with no significant elevation gain or loss, and coastal walks go from the shore level to the top of headlands and back down to the coast, with elevation gains and losses up to 600 feet. Walks are along both coastal and inland paths. The terrain includes trails that are sandy, rocky, or packed earth with some loose stones or gravel as well as farming and dirt roads, and occasionally a paved country road. Cornwall's appealing scenery ranges from far-reaching Atlantic vistas from cliff tops which plunge to tiny coves, to long sandy beaches with crashing waves and sand dunes backed by low hills with prehistoric remains of habitation and mining and medieval chapels. A favorite British seaside destination, Cornwall's picturesque fishing villages and port towns have a long tradition as communities for artists who've been attracted here by the unique light, the land- and seascapes, and the surprisingly lush and subtropical vegetation.
